What in the world is keeping people so sick and tired?
Discover a film that may give you and your patients the answer.

Could your patients' struggle to stay vital and healthy be related to an invisible, unrecognized stress that they face every day? Could the radiation from their cell phone and other electronic devices be wearing them down each day, keeping them up at night, or slowly and steadily assaulting their health?

Maybe you've heard about the numerous scientific studies that show why this may be the case. What you may not have heard is a compelling personal story that has motivated and guided you to do something about it. This is what you'll find in a documentary film called Surrounded, available online during a free screening from July 26-30. Watch the film trailer and sign up for the online screening at: <https://surroundedfilm.com/trailer>
